President Obama's recently released Nuclear Posture Review and budget support the construction of new facilities that will expand U.S. nuclear weapons production capacity. These facilities would allow production of new, modified or replacement warheads on a large scale. If the Nonproliferation Treaty is to be successful, the United States must be held accountable for nuclear policies that undermine the nonproliferation regime and threaten international security.

You are invited to hear citizen experts from communities that are directly involved discuss the nonproliferation, policy, and human impacts of nuclear weapons production.
